

afaq

StartUp 3
Listening

Unit9 – Lesson3
Page107

Have your Ss look at the picture. Convey the meaning and try to elicit the word. Then practice the pronunciation chorally and individually.

Teach the form of the word. Then ask some concept checking questions.

WARRIOR

Have your Ss look at the picture. Convey the meaning and try to elicit the word. Then practice the pronunciation chorally and individually.

Teach the form of the word. Then ask some concept checking questions.
INVISIBLE

A 09-19 Read the Listening Skill. Then listen to the first part of the story. What do you think the story is going to be about? Predict what you think will happen.

LISTENING SKILL Predicting

When you're listening to a story or narration, you can understand it better if you make predictions about what you're going to hear or about the things that you think will happen. To practice the skill, listen to a short part of a passage, then stop to list the vocabulary, actions, or emotions that you hear. Then listen to the entire passage and check your predictions.

Familiarize the students with the listening part. Play the audio once to do the task.

B 09-20 Listen to the entire story. Were your predictions correct?

C ▶09-20 Listen again. Circle the correct answers.

1. The man and his wife moved to a new house / got a new cat / bought new furniture.
2. They were worried / angry / excited about the change.
3. They looked for Tiger in the attic / downstairs / in the basement first.
4. They also searched the closets and bedrooms / bedrooms and attic / attic and roof.
5. The cat was probably in the attic / in the moving van / outside before he returned to the kitchen.

Have the Ss do the activation task in breakout rooms.

D PAIRS What do you think Tiger was doing when he disappeared?

Anyone who has a cat knows that they're like ninjas, those Japanese warriors that are almost invisible. They can jump from the floor to a high table. They move without making any noise. Sometimes you don't even know they're right behind you. Best of all, they can hide so well that you might never find them.

A couple of months ago, my wife and I moved into a new house. It's much bigger than our old house, with an attic, a basement, and a big garage. We were excited, but our cat, Tiger, wasn't. When we got to the house, I could see him trying to hide in the corner of his carrier with his ears flat against his head. As soon as the movers headed toward their truck and we opened his carrier, he disappeared.

At first we weren't worried. We thought he was upstairs. But when it was time for his dinner and we called him, he didn't come to the kitchen—and he never misses a meal! So, we started to look for him. First we searched downstairs. We looked under all the furniture in the living room, under the stairs towards the back of the house, and in the small bathroom. We even went back into the kitchen, but he wasn't there.

Then we went upstairs, and looked in the bedrooms—and in all of the closets. Tiger wasn't anywhere! The attic door was locked, so we knew he wasn't up there, and there was no way he could get outside and on to the roof.

My wife was upset and I was exhausted. We went back downstairs to have dinner. She kept saying, "He's lost!" And all I could say was, "If he's outside, he'll come home soon."

We went into the kitchen, and there was Tiger, eating his dinner. He was covered in dirt, and there were leaves and little feathers stuck in his fur. I said, "Where have you been, Tiger?" I could swear he was smiling at me, but he didn't make a sound! I guess we'll never know where he was all that time . . .

READ THE SCRIPT AND UNDERLINE ANY NEW WORDS YOU DO NOT KNOW.

Anyone who has a cat knows that they're like ninjas, those Japanese warriors that are almost invisible. They can jump from the floor to a high table. They move without making any noise. Sometimes you don't even know they're right behind you. Best of all, they can hide so well that you might never find them.

A couple of months ago, my wife and I moved into a new house. It's much bigger than our old house, with an attic, a basement, and a big garage. We were excited, but our cat, Tiger, wasn't. When we got to the house, I could see him trying to hide in the corner of his carrier with his ears flat against his head. As soon as the movers headed toward their truck and we opened his carrier, he disappeared.

At first we weren't worried. We thought he was upstairs. But when it was time for his dinner and we called him, he didn't come to the kitchen—and he never misses a meal! So, we started to look for him. First we searched downstairs. We looked under all the furniture in the living room, under the stairs towards the back of the house, and in the small bathroom. We even went back into the kitchen, but he wasn't there.

Then we went upstairs, and looked in the bedrooms—and in all of the closets. Tiger wasn't anywhere! The attic door was locked, so we knew he wasn't up there, and there was no way he could get outside and on to the roof.

My wife was upset and I was exhausted. We went back downstairs to have dinner. She kept saying, "He's lost!" And all I could say was, "If he's outside, he'll come home soon."

We went into the kitchen, and there was Tiger, eating his dinner. He was covered in dirt, and there were leaves and little feathers stuck in his fur. I said, "Where have you been, Tiger?" I could swear he was smiling at me, but he didn't make a sound! I guess we'll never know where he was all that time . . .

AS HOMEWORK USE A DICTIONARY TO LOOK UP THE WORDS AND LEARN THEM.